REQUEST FOR LEGENDS

I am seeking texts of the modern legend usually known as "The Babysitter And The Man Upstairs." Briefly the story is: "A girl is babysitting when a telephone rings. She answers and hears a man threaten to kill her. She disregards the call, thinking it is probably just some prankster. The man calls again, however, and this frightens the girl, so she calls the operator and asks her to trace the next call. After the man calls a third time the operator calls the house and tells the girl to leave immediately because the man has been making his calls from the upstairs extension in the house where the girl is babysitting."

Anyone who has texts or other information about this legend please contact me at: Folklore Institute, 504 North Fess, Bloomington, Indiana 47401

W. K. McNeil