CONTRIBUTORS

MICHAEL E. BELL is a graduate student at the Folklore Institute at Indiana University. He is working on a dissertation entitled "Three Information Sources for the Interpretation of an Historical Event."

LARRY W. DANIELSON teaches in the Department of English at the University of Illinois. He is interested in ethnic American folklore, festivals, and revival groups.

RICHARD M. DORSON is Distinguished Professor of History and Folklore and Director of the Folklore Institute at Indiana University. He has published numerous books in folklore, and has recently directed the Urban Folklore Project in Gary.

HASAN M. EL-SHAMY is an Assistant Professor at the Folklore Institute. His areas of specialization are middle eastern and African folklore.

JOSEPH P. GOODWIN received his B.A. from the University of Alabama and is presently a graduate student at the Folklore Institute. His interests include folk music and the mumming tradition in Alabama.

HERBERT HALPERT teaches folklore at the Memorial University of Newfoundland. He is the author of Christmas Mumming in Newfoundland and other publications in folklore.

JOHN WILLIAM JOHNSON, a graduate student at the Folklore Institute, is presently writing his dissertation on the epic in Mali. He is the author of Heelloo Heelleelloy: the Development of the Genre Heello in Modern Somali Poetry.

JAMES P. LEARY is a graduate student at the Folklore Institute. He is presently writing his dissertation on the folklore of a group of school friends.

PHILIP NUSBAUM is a graduate student at the Folklore Institute. He is currently co-editor of the Record Review section of Folklore Forum.

MICHAEL STONER, who received an M.A. in Folk Studies from Western Kentucky University, has done fieldwork with traditional Irish musicians in Rochester, New York. Currently enrolled in the Folklore and Folklife Department at the University of Pennsylvania, he is serving as the editor of Keystone Folklore. Besides Irish music, other interests include traditional foodways, storytelling, and post-and-beam construction.

ELEANOR WACHS is a doctoral student at the Folklore Institute and an Associate Instructor in American Folklore. She received a M.A. in American Studies from City College of the City University of New York.
GERALD E. WARSHAVER is Instructor of English at Brooklyn College in New York City where he teaches courses in American Folklore, Urban Folklore, and Comparative Mythology. In addition, under the aegis of the American Studies Program, he has established and taught an interdisciplinary course entitled "The Immigrant Experience in Literature."

MERRY WEED, a graduate student at the Folklore Institute, is particularly interested in the folklore of Ireland and folklore and literature. She is currently working on her dissertation, which is entitled "Warrior Women of Ireland."

GLORIA YOUNG is a graduate student in the anthropology department at Indiana University. She is presently doing dissertation research and teaching in Arkansas.

THOMAS A. ZANIELLO teaches English at Northern Kentucky State College in Highland Heights, Kentucky.