The term "protest song" covers a latitude of musical creation and views of society. A "protest", of course, is an utterance of opposition or resistance, "song", a setting of a text for voice, with or without accompaniment. Defining the genre, unfortunately, is not as easy a task as it first appears. A protest song suggests resistance to an abstraction of society—a song which expresses or reflects the spirit of opposition to a social order, past or present. A lament is not a protest song unless it includes some form of opposition to the condition depicted. Nor is a work song a protest song, unless there is more resistance than bitterness to the worker's complaint.

Thus, the literature on war songs would not be included in this listing, except as those songs criticize the military order under which the singers fight, or the social structure that created the war. Items of every ideology, of course, are included here, as well as song collections which include protest songs. Contemporary composers are represented by a single collection. Materials on the music of social protest are incorporated when they discuss the song form.

There is considerable variance in these standards. "Who Killed Cock Robin?" may once have been a protest song but its present audience is largely unconscious of this past. Because many protest songs reflect the singer's world view (and not always the listeners'), some have escaped attention, particularly the songs of African-Americans during the 19th century. On the other hand, some protests couched in the song form are practically unsingable, such as those composed by politically-militant but classically-trained composers in the 1930s.

I acknowledge the assistance of Alan Dundes, Archie Green, Lawrence Levine, and Chris Strachwitz, and the exercise of a sometimes arbitrary personal judgment in the preparation of this listing.

A SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY OF PROTEST SONG IN THE UNITED STATES

General Works

Adomian, Ian "What Songs Should Workers' Choruses Sing?" Daily Worker, 7 February 1934, p. 5.

Allan, Anne. Sing, America. New York: Worker's Bookshop, 1944.

* Indicates songbook
Sing a Song of Social Significance. Bowling Green: Bowling Green University Popular Press, 1972. (collected essays)

"Folk Song's Back to Stay." Daily Worker Magazine, 6 March 1949, p. 2.

Gold, Mike. "Change The World." Daily Worker, October 19, 1933, p. 5; 12 January 1934, p. 5; 19 January 1934, p. 5; 21 April 1934, p. 5; 22 May 1934, p. 5; 17 June 1934, p. 5; 22 November 1934, p. 5; 23 November 1934, p. 5; 30 October 1935, p. 5; 6 November 1935, p. 5; 2 January 1936, p. 5; 17 May 1938, p. 7; 2 January 1946, p. 7; 7 February 1946, p. 6. (Columns particularly devoted to protest song)

"The Story of Ella May (Wiggins)." New Masses, November 1929, pp. 2-4.

"Revolutionary Music." New Masses, February 1933, p. 27.

Morgan, Sonail. "Antin war protest songs: Folklore in a modern age." Folklore Newsletter of the University Folklore Association, University of Texas at Austin, 1970, pp. 75-80.

"Native American Music." Sing Out!, no. 5, (September-October, 1975) (special issue).

"Remembering Woody." Mainstream, no. 8 (August 1963), pp. 27-33. (Woody Guthrie Issue)

"People's Songs." Sing Out! no. 3 (July 1950), pp. 8-9.

Tracy, Hugh. "$\text{Music as an Agent of Political Expression.}$" Sing Out! Summer 1963, pp. 45-49.

Wagner, I. "$\text{We Shall Overcome.}$" Jazz Magazine, 22 October 1966, pp. 50-52.

Songs of Industrial Protest

Auvilles, Ray and Lida. Songs of the American Workers. Cleveland: John Reed Club of Cleveland, 1934.

"'Come All You Poor Workers,' She Sang to the Harlan Miners." Daily Worker, 4 June 1941, p. 7.

Talking Union. Folkways Records, FH5285. (liner notes)

"Aunt Molly Jackson." Daily Worker, 10 January 1942, p. 7.

"Open Door at Almanac House." Broadside (NYC), 30 June 1962.

"Winter and War Come to Almanac House." Broadside (NYC), 30 June 1962.

Only a Miner. Urbana, Ill.: University of Illinois Press, 1972.

"Aunt Molly Jackson Memorial Issue." Kentucky Folklore Record 7 (October 1961).

Labor Songs For All Occasions. Madison: University of Wisconsin Songbooks For Summer Sessions, 1938, 1940.

Let The People Sing. Madison: University of Wisconsin Summer School For Workers, 1941.

"People's Songs and Singers." New Masses, 16 July 1946, pp. 9-12.

"Whatever Happened to Singing in the Unions?" Sing Out! no. 2 (May 1965), pp. 28-31.
*Songs Our Union Taught Us. New York: Educational Department, ILGWU, n. d.
"Song With a Purpose." People's World, 16 April 1940, p. 5.
*STFU Song Book. Memphis: Educational Department, Southern Tenant Farmers Union, ed.
"Protest songs from the Butte mines." Western Folklore 26 (Fall 1967): 157-67.
Afro-American Songs of Protest

"Black Music in America." Sing Out! no. 6 (November-December 1975) special issue.

Latin-American Songs of Protest.

Pena, Felix A. "Folk Music of La Raza." Sing Out! no. 3 (September-October 1976), pp. 19-23.

Topical Song Movements of the 1960s

"God is Dead and Other Protest Songs Receive Vatican Radio's Blessing." Variety, 5 June 1968, pp. 1, 60.

Russell, Herbert. "I Gave My Love a Cherry, So Tell It Like It Is, Baby!" High Fidelity, no. 12 (December 1968), pp. 34-58.

Tamony, Peter. "'Hootenanny': The Word, Its Content and Continuum." Western Folklore, 22 (Fall 1963):165-70.

Protest in Country-Western Music

