

CONTRIBUTORS' PAGE

ROGER ABRAHAMS is the newly elected president of the American Folklore Society and has published widely in the field of folklore and performance.

ELIZABETH MOSBY ADLER is a doctoral candidate at Indiana University's Folklore Institute and a specialist in material folk culture.

HERMANN BAUSINGER is professor of sociology at the University of Tübingen, Tübingen, Germany.

SIMON J. BRONNER is a graduate student at the Folklore Institute of Indiana University and the film editor of the Folklore Forum. He also serves as editorial assistant for the Journal of the Folklore Institute.

CAROL L. EDWARDS is a lecturer in American Folklore at Indiana University and is a doctoral student at the Folklore Institute.

MARGARITIS FOURAKIS is a graduate student in Classics at Indiana University.

CARL LINDAHL is a doctoral candidate at the Folklore Institute of Indiana University and is interested in the relationship of folklore to medieval literature.

J.O. OJOADE is a professor of humanities at the University of Jos, Jos, Nigeria.