

Transcript of Online Chat

Vickie Doll: can we see presenters' slides, if there are any instead of the still slide?

ehhawley: please have speaker use microphone when responding

Ronald Hafft: We do not have Power Point slides for these recent sessions; are your referring to that.

Vickie Doll: yes. Thx.

Mary Rader: Is there a hashtag for the workshop? Another Twitter user and I are using #iuais13. Anyone else live tweeting?

Mary Rader: (This is T-Kay, not Mary)

Jennifer Schaffner: Is there a twitter hash that I could use to live tweet?

Ronald Hafft: No, we did not set that up for this session.

UOregon: It looks like #iuais13 is our hashtag by default

Mary Rader: Can respondents include their name before responding? It's difficult for online participants to discern who's talking. Thanks! - T-Kay Ronald Hafft 2: thanks for the reminder.

Vickie Doll: Agree with Kris Troost (Duke). More on the Korean reference service in N.A.: Ask a Korean Studies Librarian! A virtual reference service provided by the members of the Korean Studies Librarians of the Korean Collections Consortium of North America (KCCNA). <https://groups.google.com/forum/#!forum/askkorea>

Jennifer Schaffner: In light of this question about shared liaison services, I am curious about the Tibetan librarian shared between Toronto and Columbia/Cornell?

Lauran Hartley: What would you like to know? I am online. Lauran Lauran Hartley: Thanks to Pam for explaining our program.

Guest 2: A follow-up to the Area Studies Librarian from Wisconsin- Her comment about librarians being an "after thought", this is a very useful question. Could she articulate her vision of what structures need to prevent librarians' work and efforts from being an "after thought". What needs to change and what might we do to impact a positive change, what inhibits this currently?

Vickie Doll: Can we establish an area and international studies listserv email discussion list?

ehhawley: I would like to ask how area studies has been integrated into development of online courses developed through educational consortia or partnerships

Jennifer Schaffner: Lauran, perhaps we should talk off-line. I am fascinated by your model: the collection is strength is here and the faculty strength is there. How might principles and practicalities could be extended to other institutions. Lessons learned? What is extensible?

Lauran Hartley: Yes, Jennifer, pls contact me off-line after the conference: lh2112@columbia.edu -- and could you send me your email please?

Jennifer Schaffner: schaffnj@oclc.org

Karen Liston: I second Vickie Doll's suggestion of an area and international studies listserv. I serve 14 language areas, and must alternate my focus constantly just to try to keep up.