A Newsletter for the Interdisciplinary Study of Food

November 1986

Dear Digest Subscriber,

In appreciation of your subscription support (and your patience in waiting for the fall issue), we are sending you this index for all past issues of The Digest, free of charge. We hope you will find it useful.

As you will see in the enclosed packet, you are also being offered the chance to fill in the missing copies of your Digest collection and to purchase an entire set of back issues at a reduced price.

We encourage those of you who are connected with institutions to encourage them to acquire the complete set of back issues for research purposes.

We are hoping in the near future to issue other supplements, including a new directory of foodways researchers and a foodways course listing and syllabi collection. Please let us know how we can serve you in these supplements.

Thank you again for your support.

Sincerely,

Kathy Neustadt
Editor, The Digest

The Digest: A Newsletter for the Interdisciplinary Study of Food is a publication which acts as a clearinghouse for people interested in the study of food and culture. The objective is to facilitate the exchange of ideas and information resources among scholars and students of food in diverse disciplines and interest areas. Publications, events, current research, reviews, and funding sources are regular features of the newsletter.

A subscription to The Digest includes 3 issues per year and costs $9.00. Back issues are currently available as individual issues (see reverse) or as a full set at a reduced rate (see below). The full set includes the Directory of Researchers for the years 1980 and 1982, the Bibliographic and Teaching Guide supplement, and the newly completed Index for volumes 1-6 (available for $3.00 each, separately).

For information on editorial matters, please write to the above address, c/o Kathy Neustadt, Editor. For subscription information and to order back issues, singly or the full set, write Theodore C. Humphrey, Managing Editor, The Digest, 421 Baughman Avenue, Claremont, CA 91711.
