

WORKSHOP IN METHODS

How and Why to Experiment in Economics

Dr. Daniela Puzzello

Professor of Economics
Indiana University

Experimental economics uses human subjects to answer research and policy questions. This talk provides a brief discussion of the methodological guidelines adopted in economics experiments. It will also illustrate how experiments can be used to test the validity of economic theories or guide the design of market mechanisms and economic policies.

Friday
January 25, 2019
2-4pm

Social Science
Research Commons
Grand Hall
Woodburn Hall 200

go.iu.edu/wim