

CONTRIBUTORS

Daniel Avorgbedor is a Ph.D. candidate in the Folklore Institute at Indiana University.

John Bendix is a graduate student in the Department of Political Science at Indiana University.

Tina Bucuvalas is a Ph.D. candidate in the Folklore Institute at Indiana University.

Sandra Dolby-Stahl is an Associate Professor of Folklore in the Folklore Institute at Indiana University. Her particular interests include personal experience narrative and folklore and literature.

William S. Fox is an Associate Professor of Sociology at Skidmore College in Saratoga Springs, New York. His folklore work concerns the relationship of folklore to the social structure of advanced industrial societies and the political consequences of folklore and fakelore.

Hugo A. Freund is a graduate student in the Department of Folklore and Folklife at the University of Pennsylvania.

Annette B. Fromm is a Ph.D. candidate in the Folklore Institute at Indiana University and is currently doing research in Greece.

Phyllis Harrison has recently received her Ph.D. degree from the Folklore Institute at Indiana University and is currently teaching at Colorado College.

Guy H. Haskell is a Ph.D. candidate in the Folklore Institute at Indiana University.

Willard B. Moore has recently received his Ph.D. degree from the Folklore Institute at Indiana University and is currently residing in Minneapolis.

Felix J. Oinas is a Fellow of the Folklore Institute and a retired Professor of Slavics at Indiana University.

Elizabeth Peterson is a Ph.D. candidate in the Folklore Institute at Indiana University.

Christiane Seydou is currently Director of Research at Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique in Paris. She has worked extensively with the Fula people of Mali.

Gary Stanton is a Ph.D. candidate in the Folklore Institute at Indiana University.

Dorothy B. Vitaliano is a Professor of Geology at Indiana University and works for the United States Geological Survey. She has published articles on folklore and the environment.

John B. Wolford is a graduate student in the Folklore Institute at Indiana University.

Katheryn Wright is a graduate student of African Literature in the Department of French and Italian at Indiana University.