Pre-Reading Questions:

- What would you write about to a friend in a different country?
- Do you want to study in a different country? Why or why not?

Long ago, there lived a girl named Jane. She studied in the sixth grade. Her school was located close to her town.

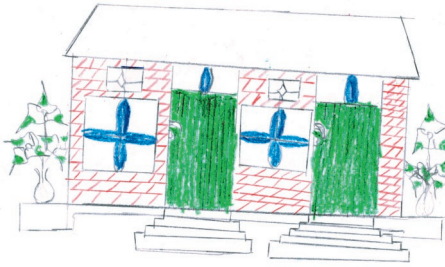

Jane's greatest ambition was to pass the national exam and enter secondary school.

After a few days, the national results were announced. Jane had received good marks, so she went to secondary school. Fortunately, Jane had an American pen pal who was rich, kind, and helpful.

Jane told her friend about her success and how expensive it was to pay fees for school.

Jane's parents wanted a sponsor because money was a problem. Jane also wanted to study in America because she spoke little English and wanted to learn more. These were two difficult problems for her parents, but her pen pal solved the problems by paying the school fees for all of her classes.
