Pre-reading questions:
• What makes you feel sad?
• What is your favorite game?

Once, in a forest, on a mountain, lived a puppy named Haiku. He lived in a cave with his six mean siblings.

One day, outside their cave, David, Haiku’s meanest brother, was teasing him about being small. This made Haiku feel sad, so he ran deep into the cave to get away from David.

Suddenly, four dogs jumped out of the bushes to scare David. The biggest dog started growing at David, so David ran into the cave and his other siblings followed him.

“What happened?” asked Haiku.

“There are a lot of mean dogs outside!” said David.

“I will go talk to them,” said Haiku.

Haiku went outside the cave and the other dogs started growling at him.

Instead of being afraid, he asked, “Why are you trying to scare us?”

“We are playing a game,” said the biggest dog. “We thought you were playing, too.”

“We did not know that! Can we play with you?”
“Yes, of course!”

Haiku went back into the cave to tell his siblings, “They are friendly. They are just playing a game. We can play, too!”

Haiku and his siblings went outside to play with the other dogs. Haiku’s siblings realized that their brother was nice, and they were all able to be friends together.
Haiku ati, “Ntabwo twigeze tubimenya! Ese twakina namwe?”

“Yego, cyane rwose!”

Haiku asubira mu buvumo abwira abavandimwe be ati, “Ni abana beza, bari kwikinira udukino. Ese natwe twajya gukina nabo!”

Haiku n’ abavandimwe be bajya hanze kujya gukina nazo. Abavandimwe ba Haiku babona ko umuvandimwe wabo agira umutima mwiza, maze bituma baba inshuti.
