

IN MEMORIAM DAVID JONASSEN (1947-2012)

Elizabeth Boling, Editor-in-Chief

As a new journal, and one hoping to promote a means of knowledge building particular to design, the International Journal of Designs for Learning has benefitted in our first years of existence from the participation of David H. Jonassen (1947-2012) on our board. We express our appreciation for this now as we mark and mourn his passing.

Dave Jonassen began his journey to becoming one of the most respected scholars in the field of instructional design and technology working as a cameraman shooting educational films. This experience may have contributed to the insight that he brought to the study of ill-structured problem solving, perhaps even to his interest in this journal. He was an active member of the board, offering insight and suggestions at each meeting and contributing as a reviewer. We are much the poorer for his absence.
