

INDIANA GENEALOGY

First Marriage Records of Orange County

Copied by N. B. and MYRTLE MARIS MAVITY

The book in which the marriage records for 1816 to 1826 printed below were entered was lost so long ago that no one in the Orange County Court House at Paoli, Indiana, knew of its existence until it was brought to light last March in the furnace room of the building. A pile of papers brought down from the attic about three years ago included the records. John Marshall, the custodian, discovered that it was interesting reading, and, when he mentioned it to Attorney Arthur Dillard, the latter investigated and restored the book to its place in the county archives. Previous to this discovery, the earliest records in the clerk's office began in 1826.

Mrs. Myrtle Maris Mavity (French Lick, Indiana) made a pencil copy of the marriage records in the rescued book and, with the help of her husband, N. B. Mavity, made three type-written copies, placing the original in the clerk's office, as the old record book is both difficult to use and too valuable to be handled. A carbon copy was sent to the Genealogy Room of the State Library. Some court proceedings are also recorded in the book but these were not copied. The spelling of names found in the book was copied without change. Mrs. Mavity discovered the fact that after March 22, 1817, there is no record of licenses issued. It is possible that returns were not always made; also that ministers making returns sometimes dated them when made, instead of using the actual date of the marriage.
