

Editor's Page

The present issue of the Indiana Magazine of History contains a larger number of pages devoted to articles than the last issue. It is believed that the character of the articles justifies this procedure, the first one being particularly timely.

This occasion, however, may be taken to call attention to two opportunities for the readers of the Magazine to help in keeping it a publication worthy of their interest and to render a service to those interested in the history of the state and nation. In the first place, much documentary material of importance to Indiana's history remains in private hands, unpublished, and unavailable to historians and historical students. Suitable material may be published in the documentary section of the Magazine. If you have letters, diaries, or other written sources of our history, will you not send them in for publication? The original will be returned safely to the possessor. In the second place, the genealogical portion of the Magazine requires support if it is to be helpful. The editor will not have time to go out and find material but he is anxious to publish genealogical material if it is sent to him. Attention is directed to the contribution by Miss Florence Crawford of the "Gilman Family History" and to "Genealogical and Historical Material in the Emeline Fairbanks Memorial Library." No doubt such contributions can be made by others.
