Query 120: McFadin Family

In 1805, Andrew McFadin and his brother Alexander, together with other McFadins (or M'Faddins), founded Mount Vernon, Indiana, called McFaddin's Bluffs until 1825. Andrew came originally from North Carolina; but the family was located in or around Bowling Green, Kentucky, between 1785 and 1800, possibly on Big Barren River in Warren County. Andrew's father is said to have fought in the Revolution. Andrew, according to William P. Leonard, History and Directory of Posey County (Evansville, Indiana, 1882), 22, fired the first shot at the battle of Tippecanoe.

Rebecca Hogan (born about 1786, daughter of Rachel Hendricks and a man by the name of Hogan) married Andrew McFadin, of Mt. Vernon, Indiana. Her mother was a sister of Nancy Hendricks, a cousin of William Hendricks, and an aunt of Peter Hendricks. The last two were pioneers of Indiana.
